THESE hot summer days that you spend puttering lazily in your garden or sitting on a shady porch with a book are not parficularly stimulating to your appetite. You may find that a crisp salad, a chilly drink and possibly a toasted sandwich is all that you want for dinner.

that you want for dinner.

But remember that Dad still must hurry for trains in the morning and spend long days in his cflice. You should consider his needs first in your meal planning. Even though you like to stay away from the kitchen as much as possible, the man of the house usually comes home tired and hungry, and after a quick shower he is ready for a substantial meal.

Onion Souffle

Most men like onions in some form with their steaks. For the flavorful souffle, peel and slice four medium-sized onions in a small amount of salted water until tender. Drain and keep the liquid. Chop the onions fine. Mel two and one-half tablespoons butter, blend in two and one-half tablespoons flour and pour on one - fourth cup of the onion liquid and one-fourth cup rich cream. Str until thickened, add the chopped onion and season with pepper and additional salt if necded. Fold in the yolks of two eggs that have been beaten until thick and fold in the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs. Turn into small greased ramekins and take in a moderate oven thirty-five minutes. five minutes. Noodle Goulash

Hungry Even Is It True That 75 Per Cent of People Fail to Find Congenial Mates?

By MARIAN MAYS MARTIN

SEVENTY-FIVE per cent of the men and wemen of this country seeking for true companionship fail to find it, or so says Dr. J. L. Moreno, in a report made before the School of Applied Sociology. Not very cheery news, is it? Let's hope the good medico is wrong. The estimate was that

Again Albert's mother exclaimed, "How do you do it."

Aunt Kate did not answer: modesty forbade her. But as the answer is no secret, I shall give it here. Aunt Kate expects obedience. She is consistent. She will strind for no nonsense. A child quickly senses whether an adult dealing with him knows her own mind.

Albert's mother on the other hand, whether she asks her child to eat, or fold up his napkin, or put away his toys, is not in the habit of seeing that the child does it. True, she may hang over him, nagging and bargaining, but already there is a note of defeat in her voice that says. "What's the use. Any girl who marries a man-with the idea that love is every-thing is bound to be folted into a realization of the fallacy of any such belief. It's a big factor in a happy marriage, but it takes externals to make marriage work anything like a well oiled perfectly adjusted machine.

All Crave Nice Work

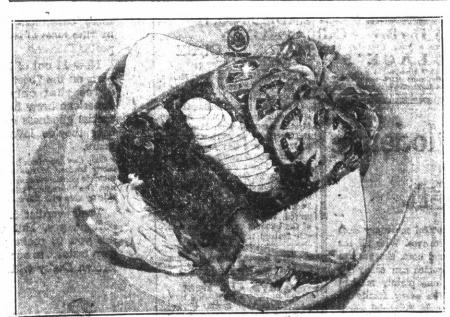

As for congenial work—we all crave it. Men and women do better work when they are doing something they like, but that we would prefer no work at all to the uncongenial sort is out of the question. Not so long as we work for what we get as much, if not more, than what we give.

Since the affairs of the world-have been knocked into sixes and sevens by the depression, it's only the idealist who has even the faintest notion that he can work at what he wants. Practical folks are thrilled at the presset of are thrilled at the prospect of getting any sort of work, and concerned not so much with the idea that it may be distasteful, as that it may be impossible of accomplishment.

Introspection is interesting, but often disturbing. It's just as well not to be too analytical or to ponder over much on reactions to the things that come under the head of "must." A job's a job, maybe one likes it and maybe one likes it and maybe one doesn't, but if it's nec one doesn't, but it it's necessary to get the money for which we are working, then we had better not think too much about whe-ther it's just the sort of job we-really and truly long to have.
